Alfred P. Sloan Foundation Announces New Grants Program

New grants to fund research on the U.S. science and engineering workforce

The Alfred P. Sloan Foundation is pleased to announce a new small grants program to support creative research on the U.S. workforce and labor markets in science and engineering (“S&E”).

Depending on the number and quality of proposals received, this grant program will provide up to 10 research grants, selected on the basis of a peer review process. Grant budgets requested cannot exceed a total of $45,000, though we expect that most will be smaller than this ceiling. The first grant application deadline is April 7, 2008.

Full details as to eligibility and requirements may be obtained on the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation website at www.sloan.org/programs/USScienceWorkforceGrants.shtml
